

Play to Learn the Alphabet

All about Abcine

Lights, Tablet, Action

Almost everyone has been to a movie theater or at least seen a movie, and we've certainly learned a lot thanks to them; we have experienced incredible stories, visited unfamiliar cities and discovered distant civilizations. We have traveled to the future, the past, and even gone into space. We laughed, we cried... and enjoyed a million adventures. Now from Meikme[®] we want to pay tribute to the motion pictures and keep learning, and therefore, we propose Abcine a fun and different way for small children to learn the alphabet.

Two for the tablet

For both big and small

Through Abcine children will find new worlds, finding letters, and recognize objects, and also make adults accompanying them at the time of learning while having fun; rediscovering that other recognizable world that will surely begin with a mischievous smile.

Once upon a time a letter

Draw and listen

Learning writing begins by learning how to draw letters, and through Abcine children will have that first contact, learning them by tracing them and overwriting them.

Upon the completion of each letter, the child will hear it through a friendly narrator.

Play it again, kid!

Learn and play

Opening the door to a fun interactive sequence where each first letter is associated with a word that represents an item or featured action of the scene.

The child will learn to associate words with the objects they have defined, plus he/she will learn its pronunciation; discovering sounds and interacting with characters through fun and varied illustrations.

About us

A big world for little ones

Meikme® is a project that invents applications for children based in stories that have influenced and excited us as adults. We think that they can entertain and stimulate the imagination of the younger ones and in turn help parents share moments and experiences with them.

In meikme®, we seek references in the adult world (cinema, music, literature, dance, etc.) that we would like to transfer to the language of children but far from the usual ways. In addition to sharing our passions: laughing, telling stories, creating characters, and laughing again and always inspired by some of our favorite heroes: Saul Bass or Maurice Sendak.

We want to make the world of the little ones big, and we enjoy adapting the grown-up world for the little ones.
